ISRAELI DECISION TO ACCEPT BONN'S OFFER OF FORMAL RELATIONS IS SEEN AS VICTORY FOR REASON OVER EMOTION

The New York Times summed up the "Israeli decision to accept West Germany's bid for formal diplomatic relations as a constructive move that benefits both sides. It also helps clear the international atmosphere. Earlier reports of Israeli conditions for normalizing relations raised possibilities that could have adversely affected the position of Chancellor Erhard's Government, while providing ammunition for Israel's enemies.

"As Israeli Foreign Minister Golda Meir remarked, the West German suggestion that diplomatic relations be established produced a debate 'between the head and the heart' for every Israeli. With memories of Hitler's mass murder of Jews still strong, it is understandable that there should be a carry-over of emotional repugnance to the idea even two decades after Nazism's overthrow. The decision to accept Bonn's offer, therefore, represents a victory for reason over emotion. Israel's international position and its economic prospects both stand to gain materially from closer ties with West Germany, and these considerations properly proved decisive.

"The confusion already reigning in Arab ranks testifies to Chancellor Erhard's wisdom in deciding to counter Egypt's welcome to Walter Ulbricht by the positive move of recognising Israel rather than the negative one of breaking relations with Cairo. President Nasser was not serving any Arab interest when he received the East German leader, and the result of his action has already brought open criticism of him from Tunisian President Bourguiba.

"Nasser's recent threats against Bonn represent a damaging attempted blackmail that can only increase West German resentment. Many Arab leaders whose prestige is less personally involved than that of the Egyptian strong man can easily calculate that their countries would suffer substantially from a break in relations with Bonn. They are hardly likely to want to bear the costs of his folly.

"President Nasser did not plan it that way, but at this moment Israel and West Germany appear to be the prime beneficiaries of his blundering venture into international gamesmanship."

Israel, in an attempt to reassure the United States of her intentions to use atomic energy peacefully, has quietly permitted American engineers to inspect a heavily guarded atomic reactor in the Negev, says the New York Times. On the basis of the inspections, American officials have come to the tentative conclusion that Israel is not now using the relatively large research reactor for the production of plutonium for atomic weapons.

However, only periodic inspections can establish if a reactor is being run primarily to produce plutonium for weapons or to produce heat for generating electricity.

Only two inspections by reactor engineers of the Atomic Energy Commission have been permitted — one a year ago and the second about a month ago. At the insistence of the Israeli Government, strict secrecy has been imposed on the fact that American engineers have been permitted to visit the Dimona reactor, situated near Beersheba.

The inspections apparently were permitted because of repeated expressions of concern by American officials about the purpose of the reactor and to insure continued American cooperation in nuclear research such as the development of a nuclear desalting plant.

Israeli officials in 1960 indicated that the installation was a textile plant that was under construction. It was only after the Eisenhower Administration publicly questioned the purpose of the project that Israel openly acknowledged to the United States that a reactor was being built.

The acknowledgment was accompanied by repeated assurances that the reactor would be devoted to peaceful research and training in industry, health and agriculture, says the New York Times. The Israelis, however, have continued to impose considerable secrecy about the reactor, which, according to American officials, recently went into operation.

Recent visitors say the large site is surrounded by a wire fence with frequent signs forbidding photographs.

In the opinion of many American and Israeli military officials, the Dimona reactor is one of the leading examples pointing up the necessity and difficulty of establishing international controls over the growing number of atomic power plants being sold throughout the world.

In the process of generating heat, the plants also will produce plutonium, and without periodic international inspections there can be no assurance that the plutonium is not being made into weapons.

The Dimona reactor, built with French help, is of the natural uranium, heavy water-moderated type that is particularly suited for producing plutonium. With its capacity of 24,000 Thermal kilowatts, the reactor is capable of producing annually enough plutonium for a couple of relatively small atomic weapons.

Informally the United States has pointed out to Israel the desirability of placing the Dimona reactor under inspection by the International Atomic Energy Agency, which has adopted a safeguard system for assuring that atomic power plants are not being used for military purposes.

The overtures have been resisted by Israel, says the New York Times, although the American inspectors were apparently permitted as a compromise.

Israel has raised two basic objections to International inspection.

One — a familiar objection raised by the non-nuclear powers — is that she should not be forced to place her national development under agency inspection until international inspection is accepted generally by all nations, including the nuclear powers.

The other is Israel's contention that the agency has discriminated against Israel in favor of the Arab states in the membership of its board of governors and the location of research centers.

Among American and British specialists in atomic energy and arms control, however, there is a widespread belief that there is another unstated reason behind Israel's objection to international controls, says the New York Times, that she is "keeping the option open" to develop an atomic deterrent against the Arab nations.

Differences of opinion developed between the United States and Israel over the amount of arms Israel needs to maintain a military balance with the Arab states.

With the cancellation of West German shipments, Israel has turned to the United States as a source of arms. Since Ambassador at large W. Averell Harriman went on a mission to Israel late in February, the two countries have been holding exploratory discussions about arms in secret.

The Administration has opened the door to selling arms to Israel. Before that the Administration took the position that the United States should not be a direct supplier of weapons to Israel. One of the few exceptions was the sale two years ago of Hawk anti-aircraft missiles — a sale that was explained by saying that the weapons were purely defensive.

As the discussions have proceeded, the Administration has become concerned that Israel is asking for more weapons than she needs. While agreeable to the sale of some arms, the Administration is fearful that if it accedes to Israeli requests, it would be contributing unnecessarily to the arms race in the Middle East.

The differences about Israeli requirements arise largely from conflicting judgments on whether the military balance is shifting because of substantial Soviet arms shipments, particularly to the United Arab Republic.

It remains the conviction of Administration officials that Israel continues to have a military superiority, and they believe that the Arab states concur.

It is a superiority based on quality rather than numbers, as appraised by Administration officials. Numerically, in terms of men and weapons, Israel is outnumbered by roughly 3 to 1 by the Arab states. But officials believe that this is more than offset by equipment, skill, and morale, says the New York Times. Israeli officials believe that the balance is shifting as a result of the Soviet arms shipments.

In the last eight years the Soviet Union has sold on credit about $1 billion in weapons to the United Arab Republic, Syria, and Iraq. The shipments are continuing, and there were diplomatic reports that in December the Soviet Union entered into a new agreement to send Cairo additional TU-16 medium jet bombers, more T-54 and T-55 medium tanks, two or three destroyers and submarines, and about five Komar-class guided-missile boats.

The military forces of these three Arab states are now equipped largely with Soviet arms. Among them they have 2,600 tanks, of which 1,200 are in the United Arab Republic's army.

More than 300 of the tanks are of the T-54 type, which is comparable to the best American medium tank, the M-60, and superior to the M-48 tanks that West Germany was shipping to Israel before termination of their arms deal. The Arabs also have a couple of hundred relatively obsolescent T-34 tanks and about 70 Stalinclass heavy tanks.

The air power of the three Arab states is built around 550 combat aircraft, of which 400 are Cairo's. Included are MIG-19 and MIG-21 supersonic fighter-bombers, IL-28 light jet bombers and TU-16's.

Their navies consist of eight destroyers and 11 submarines belonging to the United Arab Republic, 70 PT boats, of which 40 are in the United Arab Republic's navy, says the New York Times, and 12 Komarclass boats — eight in Egypt and four in Syria.

With the aid of German scientists, Cairo is also developing a ballistic missile capability. The estimate in qualified military quarters is that Cairo has 80 to 90 ballistic missiles with a 300-mile range and sufficient accuracy to hit within two miles of a target.

A group of Jewish leaders called on U.S. Secretary of State Rusk to express concern about what they described as the "military imbalance" developing in the Middle East.

The group was headed by Dr. Joachim Prinz, of Newark, president of the American Jewish Congress and chairman of the conference of presidents of major American Jewish organizations — a conference representing twenty Jewish agencies in the United States.

Dr. Prinz declined to say whether his group had suggested to Mr. Rusk that the United States of West Germany supply arms to Israel, says the New York Times. He also declined to say how Mr. Rusk reacted.

...fled Germany, Became Great Benefactors And Donors In N. Y.

Mrs. Erna Sondheimer Michael, a former head of the women's division of the United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York and a generous donor to Jewish charities in New York and abroad, died in her home at 211 Central Park West, New York, after a long illness. She was fifty-nine years old. Mrs. Michael was the wife of Jakob Michael, industrialist and philanthropist, who is the president of the New England Industries, Inc., 120 Wall Street, says the New York Times, a diversified industrial corporation with international interests.

She was born in Frankfurt, Germany, a daughter of the late Dr. Albert Sondheimer, industrialist and Jewish communal leader, and the late Mrs. Margareta Sondheimer. Mr. Michael married her in 1924. The couple left Germany in 1933 when the Nazis took power and lived in the Netherlands before coming to the United States in 1939.

Mrs. Michael, who had been active in Jewish charities since her youth, headed the women's division of New York's United Jewish Appeal from 1955 to 1957. Earlier she served on the board of the national women's division of the United Jewish Appeal. When she visited Israel in 1956 she received a citation from Premier David Ben-Gurion for her U.J.A. work.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael were donors of the Erna and Jakob Michael Institute of Biomedical Research of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine at Yeshiva University. She was a co-founder of the college, says the New York Times. Recently the couple purchased the 17th-century Vittorio Veneto synagogue in Italy and donated it to the Bezalel National Museum in Jerusalem.

They also founded the Nvei Michael Children's Village in Pardesa Channa, Israel, which is operated by the Women's Organization of Hapoel Hamizrachi, a subsidiary of the Religious Zionists of America.

Besides her work for the United Jewish Appeal, Mrs. Michael was active in the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York, particularly in its work with newcomers to the city. She was also a director of the Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Association, Lexington Avenue and 92d Street, and a former member of the New York City Council of the National Jewish Welfare Board and had been active in the Jewish Board of Guardians.

She was a member of the advisory board of the American Friends of the Hebrew University and a former member of its board of directors, and she was a founder of the University's campus in Jerusalem, says the New York Times. Surviving, besides her husband, are two sons, Ernest A. of Seattle; and Charles R. of New York; a daughter, Mrs. Jacqueline Errera, of New Haven; two sisters, Mrs. Ellen de Freudiger, of Switzerland; and Mrs. Eve Stroh, of New York; and four grandchildren.

Three Kennedys Give $1.4 Million To Einstein Center

For both personal and impersonal reasons, three members of the Kennedy family presented a check for $1,450,000 to Yeshiva University, in New York, to establish a center for research into mental retardation. The impersonal reasons were discussed by Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, of New York, and his brother-in-law, Sargent Shriver, during a press conference at the university's Albert Einstein College of Medicine in the Bronx, says the New York Herald Tribune. They spoke of the nature of the problem of mental retardation and the hope that the new center would be "a major step," as Sen. Kennedy said, "toward the elimination of this scourge from our nation."

Senator Kennedy singled out poverty as a major cause of mental retardation. Speaking at a luncheon at the medical college in the Bronx, he said:

"Everyone here today I think would agree that the application of what we know now would cut mental retardation in half. But we should all recognize that that application will require the elimination of poverty from our society."

It was Mrs. Rose Kennedy, the Senator's mother, who disclosed the personal reasons. "I had this problem about 45 years ago," she told the press conference. (Her daughter, Rosemary, 45, is in an institution for the mentally retarded.) "Mothers like me really were frustrated and heartbroken then. Today, mothers can have optimism because so much has been done."

The gift of $1,450,000 is from the Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. Foundation, which has distributed grants to other hospitals and universities in addition to research in mental retardation. Dr. Samuel Belkin, president of Yeshiva University, accepted it. Mr. Shriver said the Yeshiva center would be different from the others because "for the first time basic research in mental retardation will cut across traditional barriers and bring together the medical, psychological, educational and other research communities."

In honor of Mrs. Kennedy, the center will be named the Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy Center for Research in Maternal and Child Health and Human Development.

One million dollars of the grant from the foundation — named for a brother of Senator Kennedy who was killed in a military air accident in World War II — will be used to help construct the center. The remaining $450,000 will go to pay the salary of an associate director and to support Kennedy Fellows and Scholars.

Dr. Harry H. Gordon, of the National Association for Retarded Children, will be director of the center, says the New York Times. Senator Kennedy said it was known "that lack of adequate prenatal care results in premature birth and consequent liability to retardation." This care, he said, was not available to the impoverished.

Dentist Noted In Gum Diseases, A Top Authority

Dr. Isador Hirschfeld, an authority in treating gum diseases and for sixty-two years a practicing dentist in New York, died in Miami Beach, Florida. He was eighty-three years old and lived at 222 Central Park South, New York.

Dr. Hirschfeld had been inactive since June because of a cataract operation. He was taken ill at the hotel where he spent four months each winter and died at the Miami Cardiac Institute.

The dentist was one of the first specialists in periodontics, the treatment of gum diseases, and had lectured extensively in the U.S. and abroad.

He was born in Riga, Latvia, the youngest of seventeen children, and was brought to New York in 1890.

Dr. Hirschfeld was graduated from the New York College of Dentists. From 1916, he taught in one of the first postgraduate courses in periodontology in the U.S. at the New York Post Graduate School of Dentistry.

He was chief of the first periodontal clinic in a United States hospital at the New York Nose, Throat and Lung Hospital from 1916 to 1925. The dentist served in a similar post at Beth Israel Hospital from 1924 to 1934 and at the New York Hospital for Joint Diseases, 1927 to 1934.

In 1928, Dr. Hirschfeld founded and became first head of the department of periodontology at the Columbia University Dental School.

From 1929 to 1947 he was attending dental surgeon at Presbyterian Hospital in New York.

Dr. Hirschfeld was the author of "The Toothbrush, Its Use and Abuse", and of technical articles. He had made a world lecture tour, speaking at universities and to dental associations in Europe and in the Far East. Patients came to him from many parts of the world.

In 1941, he was president of the American Academy of Periodontology.

Dr. Hirschfeld was chairman of committees of Jewish dentists who collected dental equipment for the Israeli Army and raised funds for a dental school in Israel.

He was one of the incorporators of the New York Institute of Clinical Oral Pathology; a fellow of the International College of Dentists and of the New York Academy of Dentistry, and an associate fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine.

Dr. Hirschfeld is survived by a son, Dr. Leonard S. Hirschfeld, a periodontologist in New York; a daughter, Mrs. Herbert Keyserling, of Beaufort, S. C.; a sister, Mrs. Mary Wilson, of Miami Beach; and seven grandchildren. His wife, the former Miss Pauline Steinberg, died four years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Epstein, 4825 Jean Brillant Avenue, celebrated the engagement of their daughter, Miss Wendy Barbara Epstein, to Joseph Katz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Katz, 2625 Kent Avenue, at a dinner at their home, with the immediate family present. White, and pink roses and carnations adorned the table. The marriage will take place on August 29, at Shaare Zion Synagogue.

Mr. and Mrs. William Baker, 5852 Clanranald Avenue, were dinner hosts to fifteen guests at their home, celebrating the engagement of Miss Marilyn Esther Sloan, daughter of Harry Sloan, 4850 Randall Avenue, and the late Mrs. Gertie Sloan, to their son, Irving Harold Baker. Mrs. Baker was in a green, silk, sheath dress. Miss Sloan was in a navy-blue, knitted dress. White, and pink roses, and carnations decorated the table.

Mr. and Mrs. Marcel Chaim, 1912 Ekers Avenue; and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sheftman, 6172 Wilderton Avenue, were hosts to one hundred and thirty guests at a buffet supper in honour of the former's daughter, Miss Clara Chaim, prior to her marriage to the latter's son, Elliot Sheftman, at the home of Mrs. Sheftman's son-in-law, and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dermer, 5619 Pinedale Street. Mrs. Chaim wore a black, peau de soie ensemble, made with a beaded bodice. Mrs. Sheftman was in a blue, peau de soie dress, the bodice of which was worked with beads. Mrs. Dermer was in a red, brocade sheath dress. Miss Chaim wore an orange-coloured, and gold-toned brocade gown. The table centrepiece consisted of white, and gold-coloured pom-poms, and carnations. Dr. and Mrs. Ronald Kapusta, brother-in-law, and sister of the groom, of New York, were here for the party.

Mr. and Mrs. David Katz, 820 McEachran Avenue, gave a tea at Eaton's, in honour of her daughter, Miss Judy Esther Katz, who is the fiancee of Eddie Majerfeld, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Majerfeld, 308 Alexis Nihon Boulevard. There were fifty-five guests present. Mrs. Katz wore a black, knitted suit. Mrs. Majerfeld was in a blue, knitted suit. Their flowers were corsages of white carnations. Miss Katz, the bride-elect, wore a green, knitted suit; with a corsage of yellow carnations. The table was decorated with a centrepiece of white, and pink roses, gladioli, and pom-poms. Mrs. Issie Lampert, aunt of the bride-to-be, of Cornwall, Ont., was here for the event. The marriage will take place on, September 5, at Shomrim Laboker Synagogue.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Kalin, 189 Finchley Road, celebrating the sixteenth birthday of their daughter, Marlene, at their home, were hosts to sixty guests. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Esther Carpman, 4757 Kent Avenue, and the late Moe Carpman; and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Max Kalin. Marlene wore a pink lace and chiffon dress; and had a wristlet of pink and white carnations. A pink, and white cake, combined with a centrepiece of pink, and white roses, and pom-poms beautified the table.

Mrs. Nathan Price, 3037 Bedford Road; and her daughter, Mrs. Jerry Solomon, 147 Ashton Street; gave a tea in Morgan's Regency Room, for the former's daughter, Miss Sandra Barbara Price, who is the fiancee of Samuel Herzberg, 7450 Ostell Crescent, son of Mr. and Mrs. Israel Herzberg, of Ramat Gan, Israel. There were fifty-five guests. Mrs. Price wore a black, and white, silk dress; with a black straw hat. Mrs. Solomon wore a blue, silk dress; with a blue hat. Corsages of white, and blue carnations were their flowers. Miss Price, the bride-elect, in a blue, crepe suit, had a corsage of white orchids. White, and blue carnations, and pink roses decorated the table. The marriage will take place on June 22, at Young Israel Synagogue.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Price, 3037 Bedford Road, celebrated the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sandra Barbara Price, to Samuel Herzberg, 7450 Ostell Crescent, son of Mr. and Mrs. Israel Herzberg, of Ramat Gan, Israel, at two buffet suppers. The first evening there were ninety guests present; and the next evening there were forty. Mrs. Price wore a black, silk dress; with a corsage of pink roses. Miss Price, wearing a white, and black dress of lace and peau de soie, had a corsage of mauve orchids. A composition of white, and red carnations, and pink roses beautified the table.

MARRIAGES

KAUFMAN-SHETZER

The marriage of Miss Marion Shetzer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Shetzer, 610 Wilder Avenue, to Melvin Kaufman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kaufman, 2065 Noel Street, was solemnized at Beth Ora Synagogue, on Sunday, February 7, at six o'clock, by Rabbi Morris Halpern, assisted by Cantor Samuel B. Taube. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a fitted, Empire gown of white, peau de soie, fashioned with a round neckline; elbow-length sleeves; and A-line skirt made with a detachable train. Her tulle illusion veil was topped by an open pillbox hat trimmed with seed-pearl beads; and she carried a prayer book with white orchids and stephanotis. Mrs. Ben Kaufman, sister-in-law of the groom, was maid of honour. She wore a sleeveless, turquoise-blue, peau de soie gown, which had a beaded bodice; and low neckline; also a matching hat; and carried a cascade bouquet of white, and turquoise-blue carnations and roses. Walter Kaufman was best man for his brother. The ushers were: Easor Shetzer, brother of the bride; Ben Kaufman, and Isaac Kaufman, brothers of the groom; David Tafler, Howard Newell; cousins of the bride; Isaac Kaufman, Brian Rothberg, Fred Wax, and Victor Kaufman; cousins of the groom. White, and turquoise-blue carnations, and pom-poms were the wedding flowers. There was orchestra music. Two hundred and forty guests were received. Mrs. Shetzer, mother of the bride, wore a turquoise-blue, beaded, peau de soie gown; with a blue pill-box hat. Mrs. Kaufman, mother of the groom, wore a beaded, chiffon gown of pale turquoise-blue; with a matching hat. Their flowers were wristlets of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Kaufman spent their wedding trip in Miami Beach, Florida, the bride going away in a blue, knitted suit, having travelled via Eastern Air Lines. They have taken up residence at 575 Glengarry Street. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. Albert Newell, and Howard Newell, and Misses Susan, and Nancy Newell, of Newton Centre, Mass.; and Mr. and Mrs. Albert White, and Eileen, and Murray, of Dorchester, Mass.; uncles, and aunts of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Katz, of Allston, Mass., cousins of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Irving Feldman, and Dr. and Mrs. Stanley Isenberg; all of Toronto, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Yaros, of Brooklyn, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Morris Rothberg, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rothberg; uncles, and aunts of the groom; and Dr. and Mrs. D. Smolkin, cousins of the groom; all of Ottawa, Ont.

JAMENSKY-WEINBERG

The marriage of Miss Rhea Ann Weinberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Weinberg, 6337 Trans Island Avenue, to Jerry Jamensky, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Jamensky, 4715 Carlton Avenue, was solemnized at Beth Aaron Synagogue, on Sunday, June 21, at six o'clock, by Dr. Eliezer Ebner, Rabbi, assisted by Rabbi S. Klein. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her Empire gown of lace, and pure silk, had a bodice, webbed in tiny sequins, and seed-pearl-beads; three-quarter-length sleeves; and skirt which finished as a chapel train of lace. Her three-tiered, bouffant veil of tulle illusion was topped by a garland of stephanotis; and she carried a cascade bouquet of orchids, hyacinth bells, and stephanotis. Miss Elaine Segal was her cousin's maid of honour. Her turquoise-blue, peau de soie gown had a beaded bodice; and straight skirt. Her crown was of flowers, and she carried white roses, and carnations. Eleanor Scharf, aged seven years, cousin of the bride, was an attendant. Her pale pink dress, set over white eyelet, was embroidered with pink flowers; and made with a three-tiered bouffant skirt. She had a matching hair-bow; and carried a nosegay of pink, baby roses, and sweet peas. Irwin Jamensky was best man for his brother. The ushers were: Edward Weinberg, brother of the bride; Steven Segal, Mark Scharf, cousins of the bride; Robert Cohen, Alan Huberman, Stanley Polsky, Jerry Sherman, Ruby Shulman, and Mendy Waxman. Terry Fagen, aged seven years, cousin of the groom, was ring-bearer. Standards of pink, and white carnations, pom-poms, and chrysanthemums, against large palm leaves; and white, and gold-coloured candelabra were the wedding decorations. An orchestra played. Mrs. Weinberg, mother of the bride, wore an ice-blue, embossed, peau de soie gown, encrusted with sequins, and seed-pearl-beads; and a blue hat. Mrs. Jamensky, mother of the groom, wore a fitted, aquamarine-blue, silk gown, cut on Grecian lines. The bodice was embroidered with crystal beads; and seed-pearls. Her hat matched her gown. Each had a corsage of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Jamensky spent their wedding trip travelling through the Southern United States, the bride departing in a white, and yellow knitted suit; and a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence at 1132 St. Aubin Crescent. Here for the marriage were: Mrs. Sophie Stancer, aunt of the bride; and her son, Dr. Samuel Stancer; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Goehle, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Pettle; all cousins of the bride, all of Toronto, Ont.; H. Smalkin, great-uncle of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Widelock, Mrs. Florence Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Feller, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Weinstein, and Mr. and Mrs. M. Utcovitch; all cousins of the groom; of New York; Louis Hymovitch, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Abramson; of Ottawa, Ont.

MY SON, THE DOCTOR

By Walter John, in Jewish Affairs

The salt of the earth. Those countless numbers who spend their lives in humble dignity, battling for existence without quest or hope or fortune, satisfied with their lot. Yet not satisfied for their children and fearful for their future. What man does not dream of progress? What man, aware of his own failings and shortcomings does not centre all his hopes and aspirations upon those who follow? Sad and remorseful for lack of opportunity or having not recognised opportunity when it knocked at his door, regretful for his rudimentary education, he is determined that at least one of his children shall be properly equipped to achieve success.

Such a man is Eli, the cobbler. You can find him at any hour of the day at his last. Shaping, parring, stitching and hammering, he views the constant stream of customers with smug satisfaction. As each job is completed and handed over in exchange for cash, the notes accumulate in an old tin box. From time to time he is tempted to count the growing pile but urgent orders preclude the pleasure until late at night. Then he adds and sighs. No matter how he scrimps and saves, there is the rent to pay, food and clothing for his family, and the hundred and one commitments that cannot be avoided.

For Eli has a wife and three children who must be kept decently and respectably. There is never enough for luxury or a modest holiday. Ever conscious of his lowly trade, his dearest wish is that his elder son should rise and take a place upon a higher plane. The boy must become a professional, perhaps a doctor or a lawyer and this means years of study and much expense. Every spare cent is to be devoted to this purpose. The sacrifice had often been discussed between Eli and his wife Sarah. There was complete unanimity.

The subject of their aspirations is a tall gangling dreamy-eyed youth. Jack is quiet and reserved. At sixteen there is very little evidence of preference or resolve. Perhaps his formative years have been scarcely marked by the dull and uninspiring environment in which he lives. His parents, immersed in the daily struggle of making ends meet, ignorant and uninformed, were able to provide sustenance for the body but not for the mind. Beyond inculcation of good and bad, right and wrong, their influence was negative.

Yes, there was ambition but ambition does not flourish easily in arid soil. It must be flooded with the waters of endeavour. It must be tended with tact. Weeds of frivolous diversion must be carefully removed. Money may be deemed to be the fertiliser. It is to be applied gently and sparingly and allowed to intermingle with the natural resources of mother earth. Only in this way will the plant be sturdy. But, alas! Eli and Sarah were no gardeners. Green fingers were unknown to them.

In spite of being bogged down in the morass of parental ignorance, Jack had character. Highly principled, painstakingly studious, aware of what was expected from him, he did his best. And if he was not regarded as particularly clever by his teachers, he was at least an average pupil worthy of his school. He was not very popular with his class mates. They looked upon him as a swot and swots are an anathema in general. He was no good at sport. Not that he was lazy —he just could not adapt himself to the rough and tumble of the playing fields.

In the course of time Jack matriculated well and was qualified to be admitted to University. In his last year at school he had come under the influence of Tony. Tony, who came from a wealthy home,

Grossinger's
CALLING ALL SINGLES!

Grossinger's is going to hold its fabulous Spring Bunny Ball Weekend for Singles, April 9-11. It'll be a wonderful weekend, full of romantic fun, frolic, and festivities that will make it easy for boy to meet girl and for girl to meet boy.

★ ★ ★ ★

CUPID TO BE BUSY — Dan Cupid will be kept exceptionally busy during the Bunny Ball Weekend. We have a novel plan that will help him give his little bow a good workout. We're going to introduce what we call "Round-Bunny Seating." This will enable you to change tables, if you wish, for each of the six meals. That way, you'll be able to meet and make more new friends! So, if you're single, mate, don't hesitate. It'll be great, April 9-11!

Passover at Kutsher's is a holiday as well as a Holy Day

At Kutsher's, the Passover starts off with the golden tones of Cantor Sholom Kats and the Samuel Sterner Choir. (Dietary laws, of course.) Then, you can go a few holes on our 18-hole golf course, take a swim in our heated indoor pool, limber up in our indoor health club, play a little badminton or tennis, ice-skate on our artificial rink . . . or you can just snooze the day away in one of the over-stuffed chairs in our beautiful new lobby. At night, you can live it up in our 2 night clubs (enclosed lakeside promenade from lobby and dining room to the clubs), laugh it up watching our great Broadway entertainment, dance it up until dawn . . . and don't worry about the kids. We've got enough to keep them busy day and night. As busy as we keep you, OK?

Learn to ski mid-week specials: Free instruction, Free tows, Free equipment.

CLASS IN COOKERY

GREEN PEPPER SOUP

two medium-sized green peppers one large onion
one level tablespoon butter
one large potato
two tablespoons sugar
one twenty-eight ounce tin of tomatoes
one-half teaspoon salt

Slice the green peppers and onion. Saute in butter. Stir constantly until slightly brown. Add the tomatoes and fill a two and one-half-quart sauce pan with water. Then add the sugar and salt as above or to taste. Simmer for one hour. Dice the washed and peeled potato, add to the soup, and simmer for another fifteen minutes.

Mrs. Archie Benjamin,
5190 Grand Boulevard, Montreal.

PASSOVER LEMON MERINGUE PIE

one-half cup of Passover cake meal one-quarter cup of oil
two tablespoons of sugar
one pinch of salt

Blend ingredients together to make the crust. Press the dough into a nine-inch pie pan. Bake in 375 degree oven, for fifteen or twenty minutes; or until brown.

Filling

four tablespoons of potato starch
one-quarter teaspoon salt
one cup of sugar
three eggs
two and one-half cups of water
two tablespoons of oil juice of a lemon
grated rind of lemon

Combine potato starch, salt, and one-half cup of sugar in a double boiler. Add water. Cook over boiling water until thick, stirring constantly. Cover and cook slowly for ten minutes, stirring occasionally. Combine egg yolks with the other half cup of sugar. Spoon in three tablespoons of hot cooked mixture. Stir rapidly until smooth and pour into hot mixture. Cook for two minutes. Stirring constantly, remove from heat, stir in lemon juice, and rind. Cool at room temperature, not in refrigerator. Pour into baked pie shell and cover with meringue.

Meringue

three egg whites
one pinch of salt
one-third cup of sugar

Beat egg whites with salt until soft peaks are formed. Gradually beat in sugar, a tablespoon at a time. Beat until there is no trace of sugar left. Bake at 350 degrees for fifteen minutes; or until lightly browned. Chill before serving.

could have been spoilt and pampered, but to his credit he spurned the easy way of life. He was a dogged and purposeful youngster. He knew exactly what he wanted to be and nothing on this earth would deter him.

There was no doubt he would make a good medical man. He had always been interested in that profession. The family doctor was an outstanding personality. He not only attended to every ache and pain but was an intimate friend as well. Tony admired him. He liked his bedside manner. It bred confidence. He treated Tony as an adult and when Tony told him he also would like to be a doctor, he encouraged the boy in every way.

Jack was irresistibly drawn towards Tony. His enthusiasm was infectious. Here was a profession that appealed. When Jack told his parents that he had made up his mind they were overjoyed. The very idea was exciting. Certainly their son should be a doctor. They counted up their painfully acquired reserves. Yes, there would be enough provided they continued to be careful.

So the start of six long years of preparation. They were hard years of unremitting labour but Jack found them satisfying. The more he studied, the more he became enthralled. As each year came to an end, the next one was met with fortitude and resolve. There was no wavering, no straying from the dedicated path. Modelling his behaviour on that of Tony's, imitative of every gesture, of every action, he was fast emerging from indifference to certainty.

When Eli and Sarah entertained their friends, it was balm to the heart to be asked how the doctor was coming along. The title became accepted as a matter of course and Sarah never tired of talking about "My son, the Doctor."

At length came the final year and the proud parents together with hundreds of others filled the Great Hall to capacity. They watched with awe the colourful procession of grave, be-gowned dignitaries, and when it was Jack's turn to be presented to the Vice-Chancellor and they saw him kneel and receive his accolade, their hearts were near to bursting-point with pride. "My son, the Doctor" was a reality.

But of course before he would be allowed to practise he had to serve another year as an interne. As he would be often "on call" it was more satisfactory if he were to live in.

Thus he stayed in the doctors' quarters in hospital and no longer lived at home. Every day he phoned his mother to keep in touch. This was the fulfilment of the promise he had made.

As the months went by he was so immersed in his job, so much part and parcel of his new strange and thought-provoking life, that visits to his home became shorter and infrequent. He would suddenly arrive, always in a hurry, staying for tea or an occasional light supper and then he would be off again. There was an invariable excuse of duty.

Sarah was petulant. "The boy never seems to have time for us. Running here, running there. We hardly ever see him." Eli was more philosophic. Although a humble cobbler he was no fool. He had realised what was inevitable. The time would come when they would be lucky to see him at all. For it was apparent they had little in common with their son.

Apart from the accident of birth, they dwelt in two different worlds. Eli could only talk of shoes and leather, of customers and cash, whilst Jack's interest was in his fellow practitioners and his patients with their multifarious diseases and frailties.

Then the blow fell. Jack had secured a scholarship which would enable him to spend a year overseas for advanced study and new experience. He came to say goodbye and said he would write as soon as he had settled down. Then, only then, did Sarah realise she had lost him. "My son, the Doctor!" What did it mean now? There was something unreal about it — he was thousands of miles away.

His letters came at long intervals. He described his work, his new-found interests and his progress. Only one piece of news gave them pleasure. He was a social success. He was mixing with professors and the upper crust of his profession. He was invited to many parties and hob-nobbed with people that count. It was nice to know he had been accepted and had arrived.

Eli, with a touch of caustic humour, "I bet they don't know his father is a shoemaker." Sarah, very indignant. "What's wrong with that? You are honest and hardworking. You use the best materials. You have never done anybody down." The facts may be unanswerable but the poor woman's vision is limited by her own narrow horizon. Eli, don't try to explain. She will never understand.

The term of the scholarship was coming to an end. In anticipation

Is Hitler's Shadow Still Alive?

By Henry J. Santon, in the Jewish Frontier

A high German court official recently declared that Martin Bormann, the most notorious war criminal still missing, was still alive. None of the German prisoners of war, who filled in the gap relating to the dramatic end of Adolf Hitler and Eva Braun, his wife of a day, referred to Martin Bormann, the shadowy but once powerful figure behind Der Fuehrer.

Throughout his political career, Martin Bormann avoided publicity. Born January 17, 1900 at Halberstadt, Saxony, Bormann first joined an anti-Semitic organization in 1920. Sentenced to a year's imprisonment for his participation in the murder of Kadow, a young member of the illegal Freikorps Rossbach, Bormann joined the Nazi Party immediately upon his release in 1925.

A hard worker, he knew how to make himself indispensable. When the Party came to power in 1933, he was appointed Reichsleiter, General of the S.S. and Chief of Staff to Hitler's Deputy, Rudolf Hess. Upon the latter's mysterious flight to Scotland; Bormann succeeded him as head of the Party Chancery. In Hitler's will and political testament, witnessed by Goebbels and Bormann, Hitler stated: "As executor of my will, I nominate my most faithful Party comrade, Martin Bormann. He is given full legal authority to make all decisions. He is permitted to hand to my relatives anything which has sentimental value or is necessary for the maintenance of a modest standard of life."

The Berghof, Hitler's mountain residence, a complex of eighty-seven houses, Hitler's birthplace in Braunau, Austria, and the cottage in which Hitler's parents had lived in Leonding near Linz, were all left to Bormann.

Before the curtain fell on the drama in Hitler's bunker, fifty feet underground in the Reich's Chancellery at Berlin, Bormann succeeded in removing two of his most powerful rivals, Goering and Himmler. Twisting the meaning of a telegram message from Goering, and informing Hitler of Himmler's secret negotiations, Bormann procured from Hitler a declaration placing both under sentence of death for treason. Himmler swallowed poison when captured, Goering during the Nuremberg trial, and Goebbels, Bormann's last rival, who was to be chancellor in the new government, committed suicide together with his family, shortly after Hitler and Eva had ended their lives in the bunker.

During the night of May 1st to May 2nd, the surviving members of the staff attempted a mass escape. A considerable number succeeded in making their way out of Berlin. One of these was Bormann, who survived an explosion and was last seen in civilian clothes, separated from the main group of fugitives.

Like Himmler, Bormann had controlled powerful organizations. But he had also known how to make himself necessary to Hitler. As early as 1935, Hitler had appointed him his own secretary. From that time it was Bormann who decided whom Hitler should see and what he should read. Hitler, who hated systematic work and routine, attributed this to his artistic nature, often complaining that he should have been an architect or painter instead of a statesman. In his portly secretary he found a tireless listener to his ideas on baroque art and monumental forms such as the pyramids, which reflected the power of the rulers.

Bormann, a practical administrator, brutal even by Hitler's standards, cared little for Grecian or Gothic lines or the Christian aspects of the Renaissance, but he worshipped every word and gesture of Hitler.

While other ranking members of the Nazi hierarchy consolidated their power, Goering as idol of the Luftwaffe, Himmler as the head of the S.S., Bormann held undisputed sway in the last years in the name of Hitler. The strength of his hold is demonstrated by the fact that he had his brother Albrecht appointed Hitler's personal adjutant towards the end of the war, although Albrecht was an incompetent and insignificant figure.

Bormann's position was built on his skill in attending Hitler's many weaknesses. He was always at Hitler's call, adjusting his hours to Hitler's whose insomnia often called for discussions throughout the night. Bormann used these sessions to undermine the position of others who were commanding armies in the field or absent on other business. Certain documents and recorded conversations seem to indicate that he had undermined the position of his predecessor, Rudolf Hess, whose blind fidelity to Hitler had rivaled his own.

Bormann's friends were few and changed frequently. His enemies were always the same. Albert Speer, Minister of Armament and an outspoken enemy of Bormann, once said that a few critical words from Hitler would have caused all Bormann's foes to jump at his throat, but those words were never spoken. Goering warned Hitler of the danger of giving Bormann too much power and Himmler, in a similar move to check Bormann, also failed to break his power.

Unlike other members of the Nazi hierarchy, Bormann disliked medals, flashy uniforms, and public functions. He mocked at Goering's ostentatious manner of living and vanity. He used to send his old uniforms home to be made into clothing for his children.

Only Hitler was beyond Bormann's criticism. Bormann accepted all of Hitler's idiosyncrasies without questioning, among them Hitler's refusal to be seen wearing glasses. (So that Hitler could read his speeches without spectacles — which he wore only in his office — they were typed on a special typewriter with large type.)

Married to the daughter of Major Buch, chairman of the dreaded Party court, Bormann maintained a strange menage. His wife Gerda, a fanatical Nazi, had born him ten children, of whom nine survived. The "Bormann Letters," edited by Trevor Roper, reveal that he communicated almost daily with his wife, not only on matters pertaining to the family, his work, military and political aspects, but also about his extra-marital love affairs.

In one of her replies to Bormann she regretted that he had taken his current mistress to mutual friends who were narrow-minded. Gerda was also alarmed because she suspected that this particular lady had not been completely purged of all Christian concepts.

In another letter, she suggested that a law be passed which would entitle all healthy and valuable men to have two wives. She deplored the fact that so many worthy women were doomed to barrenness when the nation needed their children for the struggles to come. Eventually, even Gerda could not suppress her natural instinct and she began to question whether or not his love for her had changed.

Bormann paid little attention to his wife's concern, sure that her devotion to the Party outweighed any personal considerations. He even sent Gerda all the letters he had received in the course of his extra-marital relations. One of the ladies visited Bormann's home on several occasions, but he had instructed his wife to make no reference to their correspondence.

During Eva Braun's visits to the Berghof, Gerda had ample opportunity to get acquainted with the Fuehrer's mistress, but Gerda's correspondence reveals Eva's studied coolness and deplores her apathy in the national cause, the performance of war work, and even such matters as the prenatal influence on children.

Prey to false mysticism identification with the Nibelungs to listening to fortune-tellers and pseudo-prophets, Gerda was exuberant when a Swedish clairvoyant predicted a German victory for 1946, but Bormann's reply was stern and brief. Lack of faith, he charged, made people cling to such rubbish. Should the time ever come when Hitler ceased to need him, he went on, he would disappear from the political scene to retire to the fine estate which would be his reward for a job well done.

In February, 1945, of the Anglo-American offensive in the West, Bormann predicted that a victory for the enemy would not only mean extermination of the German race, but also destruction of its culture. The Meistersinger would be replaced by jazz.

"Could Destiny lead our people and Fuehrer so far along the wonderful road only to abandon us now and see us disappear forever?" he wondered. But while Gerda wrote of "The Twilight of the Gods," Bormann felt no premonition of death, and assured her of his burning desire to live.

After the collapse of the Nazis, Gerda escaped to the Tyrolian Alps in Austria together with her nine children. When her illness was diagnosed as cancer, she turned herself in to the local authorities in May, 1945, and died shortly afterwards.

Seven of Bormann's nine children have accepted the doctrines of the Catholic Church, and Adolf Martin, the eldest son, to whom Hitler was godfather, was ordained a priest in 1954. Bormann's anti-religious attitude was remarkable even among Nazis. In his hatred of Christianity, he warned his wife to be particularly watchful around Christmas. He called it the most crucial season and was afraid that his children might swallow a dose of its "poison."

While there was still a corridor between the Russian and American armies, Bormann wanted Hitler to make his escape. Goebbels, to the very end a dramatist, objected. "Do you want spectators to boo and whistle when you appear on a color screen a hundred years from now?" he asked in the final stage of Germany's collapse. A propagandist all his life, Goebbels wanted to enter the halls of Valhalla proudly and with head held high. If the end was inevitable, he declared pompously, it had to be worthy of the "Goetterdaemmerung."

When word reached Hitler how Mussolini had died, he made sure that the enemy would never capture him alive, nor his body. His final orders to procure two hundred litres of gasoline for the destruction of his own and Eva's bodies were carried out.

That group of dedicated Jews who tracked down Eichmann against difficult odds, may also catch up with Bormann, already sentenced to death in absentia during the Nuremberg Trials.

of his home-coming, every effort must be made to decorate and refurnish the house, so that their son should never be ashamed of inviting his friends. There would be lots of visitors. Of that there was no doubt. Everybody would want to hear what he had seen and what he had done. Eli was busy. He called in a painter. There must be a new carpet for the lounge.

The chairs must have new loose covers. Curtains to be taken down and washed. Sarah in a flurry of spring cleaning happily awaited the great day. She imagined herself sitting in a corner, effacing herself, so as to allow him to hold the floor. To enjoy her triumph quietly, asking for no thanks, no appreciation. She and Eli had done their duty nobly. Their recompense was his success.

The postman on his round nonchalantly flipping the mail into the box, without thought of drama and quite unaware of his role of winged Mercury. The letter, always pounced upon with eager anticipation, lay opened before them. Jack had decided he was not coming back.

He had secured an excellent appointment which would lead to something quite big. He had met a charming girl whose father was influential. Very soon he hoped to tell them more about her. There was a hint of marriage. He liked the country. He missed the sunshine but there were so many compensations.

Then followed due acknowledgement. He would never forget what his parents had done for him. They were always in his thoughts. He professed undying love and affection and hoped they would be re-united one day.

Empty phrases! Cruel fate! Better to have made him a cobbler. Better that he should have remained here to comfort them in their old age. But that is foolish, wishful thinking. We don't really mean that.

What was the use? How could he be persuaded to return? No tears, no protestations, no appeals to sentiment. The bird has flown the nest. May his wings grow strong. May he soar to dizzy heights and sing his song. Listen to it and be happy. A purpose has been fulfilled.

My son, the Doctor. My son. My son.
